Downey USD used
GoGuardian Teacher on Windows to save time and give teachers confidence in their use of school technology.

CHALLENGE

Like most districts, Josh Davis of Downey Unified School District was struggling to drive device adoption among his teachers. His intention was to provide tools that would help teachers create new and innovative lessons, but he was met with resistance and fear of the unknown.

ACTIONS

Forced to face their technology fears, DUSD had initially implemented a clunky solution that ultimately failed teachers and students, as well as wasted valuable class time. What they needed was a cross-platform program that gave teachers confidence in their devices. That was when they learned that GoGuardian was now on Windows, making it possible to work with Microsoft Education tools, such as OneNote and Edge Browser. The district chose to use GoGuardian as their complete 1:1 technology program.

RESULTS

GoGuardian Teacher allowed Downey's teachers to be confident in their use of technology in the classroom and to gain back valuable class time. Along with the increased instructional time, DUSD also saw the benefits of increased student engagement, limited distractions, and access to technology for all stakeholders.

Supercharged by a Microsoft partnership, GoGuardian enables DUSD teachers to manage their classrooms on any device, browser, or operating system. The teachers feel empowered when they use GoGuardian, and the students are better positioned to succeed more safely in the 21st century classroom.

"Our big challenge was taking that fear away from the teachers. Sometimes for teachers, they have to see it in order to understand it."

JOSH DAVIS, INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNOLOGY COACH

"Technology is not going away... Knowing that there's programs and software out there like GoGuardian that would help teachers use it safely and productively I think is a good thing."

SCOTT SCHEINER, TEACHER

Downey USD used GoGuardian Teacher on Windows to save time and give teachers confidence in their use of technology.

“It’s provided so much of a safety net having the ability to just push the website out there for them streamlines things...The time that we have to work on the projects is increased.”
